Student behaviour on buses: what is expected?

This fact sheet contains general information about how students should behave on buses. The information is current as at May 2005.

Overview

New Zealand has a very good school transport record. Everyone involved in school transport is very keen not just for this record to be maintained, but for risks and hazards to be minimised at all times. Because the Ministry of Education is committed to maintaining this high level of safety, it requires safe behaviour from everyone using school buses.

What sort of behaviour is expected of students using buses?

Students who travel on a school bus may continue to do so while they behave in a safe and reasonable manner. The next page lists the behaviour expected from school bus students, as well as some safety tips. Caregivers and students should take time to read and understand these expectations.

What happens if a student behaves unsafely or inappropriately?

If a student behaves in an inappropriate or unsafe manner the school takes steps to manage this behaviour, as in any other area of school life. It is important to note that a student not meeting expected behaviour standards risks losing their place on the school bus either temporarily or permanently.

Can a driver remove a student from a bus before they have reached home or school?

No. Where a student is not meeting expected behaviour standards on a bus, the bus driver cannot simply pull over and remove the student from a bus. In the interests of safety, the bus driver must finish the route and deliver the student to their usual stop. In extreme cases, where the bus driver judges that it is no longer safe to continue the route with the student on board, the driver will pull over and contact the police or the school to remove the student.

Can a student’s place on a school bus be taken away?

Yes. Where a student’s behaviour is an ongoing or serious problem, the school and the Bus Operator may decide to withdraw the privilege of a place on a school bus. This could be a temporary measure, or in more serious cases, a permanent one. In such circumstances it is up to the caregiver to make their own arrangements to ensure they are meeting their legal obligation to get their child to school. Caregivers are not entitled to a conveyance allowance in this situation.
